Eparchy of Saskatoon Family and Life Office Bulletin:

June 2019

“The future of the world passes through the family”

St. John Paul II, Familiaris Consortio, 79

When families struggle: Psychologist Phillip Sutton offers the following advice when those we love are facing struggles or engaging in behaviours we believe to be physically, emotionally or spiritually harmful. Following this advice can help us manage our response, maintain our own physical emotional and spiritual health to maximize our ability to help.

Things to remember about another’s worrisome behavior: I didn’t CAUSE it. I can’t CURE it. I can’t CONTROL it. But I can take CARE of myself, by COMMUNICATING my feelings, needs and limits, by making healthy CHOICES, following CHRIST and believing He can bring good from EVERY situation.

‘Blame’ and anger are not helpful. Yes, we should take responsibility and seek forgiveness for our actions which may have in any way contributed to problems in our family but we must remember that all persons are free and responsible for their own choices. However, we need God’s help in situations where we see those we love making negative choices here is where we can move from Pain to Peace:

Pray: Deepen your relationship with Jesus, seek the intercession of His Mother; ask others to pray for you and your loved one. Be open to the conversion and transformation of you own heart and ask with gratitude, for love, surrender and humility.

Personalize: Pope Benedict XVI reminded us “Look into the face of the other and see that he (or she) has a soul, a story and a life: He (or she) is a person and God loves him (or her) as he loves me.”

Prepare: Seek education and truth about the prevention, causes, consequences and treatment for our loved one’s desire for and habit of worrisome behavior.

Partner: Seek support from your family, friends, parish and support groups.

Petition: for the needs of those we love, that they may encounter the truth in love that will genuinely set them on the right path.

Participate: Get or continue to be involved in the lives of those we love—his or her interests, concerns and relationships.

Principled Prohibitions: Insist that behavior in our homes comply with our standards.

Patience and Perseverance: Christ endured the cross out of love for us; love always leads to suffering, don’t give up! He loves us, even in our sinfulness and He calls us all through repentance and transformation to live in holiness.

Proclaim: Share the great things Christ has done for you, and your faith in his desire to do the same for others. Ask for the Holy Spirit to show you when to speak, and how to share your faith with love.

Have “Fun”! Scripture tells us to “Rejoice in the Lord!” and so we need to remember to have a sense of humor--focus on the things that are true, honorable, just, pure, lovely, gracious, excellent, praiseworthy,” and to that list add “funny!” Phil. 8: 8,²,57 God has a sense of humor—he made us!

SOCIAL JUSTICE REPORT

The first Evening of Sharing Our Stories was held on June 19 at Guadalupe's Parish Auditorium. These events are an important next phase in our relationship-building between our St. George's Ukrainian community and our First Nations and Metis Nation neighbours at Our Lady of Guadalupe parish. The next event for exchanging "our stories" will be held at St. George's Auditorium at a date to be announced. These events allow our two communities to understand each other in a meaningful way.

At Wednesday's gathering, we told our story about the persecution Ukrainians suffered for trying to preserve their language, culture and religion when they migrated to the area now known as Serbia. Guadalupe presenters told the story of their uphill struggle to get attention to the crisis of missing and murdered indigenous women and girls.

A report such as this cannot capture the significance of such learning experiences. As they saying goes: "You had to be there." Of those who were there, 10 came from Guadalupe and 5 from St. George's.

This is a long-term commitment the two communities have to each other as we continue on our journey of understanding, friendship, and trust.
