The Prairie Centre for Ecumenism and The Regina Council of Churches

This year, due to the pandemic, we are not able to hold our regular events and so the Prairie Centre for Ecumenism and Regina Council of Churches have decided to partner and hold an 8-day virtual bible study series based on the themes for Week of Prayer 2022 which will run Tuesday, January 18th- Tuesday, January 25th from 12:15-1:00pm daily over Zoom with the exception of Sunday, January 23rd which will be held at 3pm.

The theme for Week of Prayer for Christian Unity 2022 is “We saw the star in the East, and we came to worship him” (Matthew 2:2) and materials have been prepared by the Middle East Council of Churches based in Beirut, Lebanon. This theme is developed through a series of reflections which extend over eight days and will be the basis of the bible study. Each day will be led by a different denominational leader. Further details and registration information will be released early in January.

Colors in Iconography

In iconography certain shapes and gestures indicate certain things about the subject presented. The same goes with colors. Below is a quick guide as to what the most common colors denote in iconography. In iconography, color can sometimes express just as much as words

Blue

Blue is usually associated with heaven, majesty, the mystical life, and mystery. It is associated with the sky and thus the infinite and everlasting world. It is often used on Christ's outer garment. A darker blue is associated with the Mother of God, who brings together the terrestrial and celestial.

Red

Red is the most common color in iconography. Being the color of blood and fire, it is the color of heat, love, vitality, life, and sacrifice. The Seraphim always hover in a red celestial fire and the martyrs are usually clothed in red. It is also the most common color on the Mother of God and is often worn by Christ in iconography.

Gold

Gold is linked with the glory of God, with sanctity, the imperishable, splendor, divine energy, and the eternal day spoken of in Revelation 21. It even symbolizes the divine nature itself.

Purple

Purple is associated with wealth and power. In ancient times it was seen as the color of the emperor- only the emperor could write in purple ink, wear purple clothes and boots, and sit on a purple throne - it was strictly forbidden to be worn by anyone else. Purple was sometimes used in the bindings of the Book of Gospels in the liturgy. It can be found in some icons of the Blessed Virgin.

White

White is the color of purity, the divine word, cleanness, innocence, wholeness, simplicity, and is sometimes used with what the Orthodox Church calls the mystical "uncreated light" experienced by Peter, James, and John at the Transfiguration. White can be found in the garments of angels, the swaddling bands of babies, and the burial cloths of the dead. Those who wear it are always considered righteous- people who do good, are just, and walk by the truth. Only a righteous person can be clothed in white.

Green

Green signifies earth's vegetation, natural living things, fertility in a general sense, freshness, eternal renovation, flowering, hope, and youth. It is often used for the clothing of martyrs whose blood, as Tertullian famously said, is the seed of the Church. It can also denote where life began such as in icons of the Annunciation or Nativity.

Brown

Brown is linked with earth, inert matter, dust, and all that is transient or perishable. It can be used in mixture with other colors in clothing to symbolize the fragility of human life which is subject to death or of symbolizing holy poverty.

Black

Black is the color of death and evil. One often finds it in association with demons or painted in caves to symbolize the darkness of sin or ignorance. On the clothing of monks (such as the Benedictine habit) it represents renunciation of sin and death to oneself.

All of these colors add to the rich meaning and diversity found in icons.
